$500,000 FIRE AT LITTLE FALLS

THRILLING RESCUES MADE BY FIREMEN

Eleven Places of Business Destroyed, 21 Families Lose Their Homes before Blaze is Brought Under Control This Morning

By CLARENCE DAHLEN
Dispatch Staff Correspondent

Little Falls gazed ruefully out of a smoke hazy sky today at the smoldering ruins of a large portion of its once ambitious business section.

The trail of ashes from the conflagration which struck at the heart of the business section by completely destroying the once impressive looking Realty Block and doing heavy damage to the American National Bank building and the Vertin Block leaves in its wake a damage estimated at more than half a million dollars.

Through the fever of the fire swept section of the business district, Little Falls business men affected worked frantically checking up their losses. Not one-half of the loss is covered by insurance, business men affected reported to the Brainerd Dispatch. One man watching the fire in its last horrible fight against the tons of water thrown on it by hose stretched from every hydrant for three blocks remarked that his estimate at the amount uncovered by insurance was about $350,000.

Eight of the 21 families who lost their apartments and household goods were poverty stricken. Children were crying while mothers and fathers were thankful at least, they said, that they escaped with their lives.

The fire is recorded as the most disastrous fire in the recent history of the northwest. It threatened for a time until the St. Cloud fire department arrived to bring help to the Little Falls department to wipe out the entire business section.

The hero of the day is Fireman Dell Batters of the Little Falls fire department who single handed went into the burning building of the Realty Block and rescued two Bell Telephone company operators who remained at their posts to send the alarm of the fire to other cities, and a scrubwoman who was trapped on the second floor while she was engaged in her duties.

Batters brought Miss Agnes Miller and Miss Alexia Tyce down the ladder on two successive trips. All other exits were blocked by the flames. Exhausted and semi-conscious from breathing the smoke and terror stricken from the flames Miss Miller struggled with the firemen until Batters was forced to pick her up and carry her to the ladder. Miss Tyce protected herself from the smoke by placing her handkerchief over her face. She was also taken from the burning building by Mr. Batters.

After rescuing two, Batters returned to bring the exhausted scrubwoman from the building where unconscious of the fire, she had been working while the flames raged under her. Miss Matilda Christenson was trapped on the second story with flames already consuming the exits. The fireman was given credit today for saving her life.

The blaze was believed to have originated from the boiler room in the basement of the Realty Block.

Theodore Gierok, clerk in Pap's Auto Supply was the first to notice the fire. On arriving at work this morning at 8 o'clock he opened the door leading to the basement and was forced back into the store by the smoke which gushed out. He ran to the street yelling "Fire." C. F. Lewis, manager of the National Tea company, took up the cry and ran into his store to telephone the fire department. He put through his call a minute before the telephone lines went out of order.

Fanned by a brisk north wind the flames got beyond the control of the Little Falls fire department and raged through the three story building housing seven business establishments and 21 tenants. The block, which was of brick veneer exterior, an old building which had given service for the past 35 years, was an easy prey to the flames.

The flames leaped from building to building so quickly that merchants and families in apartments were forced to flee without their coats and hats.

Losses were estimated as follows: Kiewit Realty Co., $95,000; J. C. Penney Co. store, $95,000; Little Falls Auto Supply Co., $10,000; Chelling Grocery, $7,500; Benusa and Pierzina Barber Shop, $1,500; Guerin McCauley Stationery store, $25,000; Pantzke Grocery, $9,000; National Tea Co., $5,000; Dr. E. L. Altendorf, dentist, $2,500; Dr. E. E. Hall, physician, $2,000; and Northwestern Bell Telephone Co., $35,000.

In addition heavy loss was done to the apartments, where the occupants were unable to save any of their household goods. Those who suffered by the fire were: Julius Bergstrom, Mrs. Phyllis Brown, M. H. Swick, A. L. Johnson, Mrs. Emma Higby, Mrs. Gertrude Benfield, Miss Julia Wood, Fred Delvin.

All the equipment of the Little Falls Business College stored on the third floor of the building was destroyed. The college had not been used for some time.

Firemen saved two other blocks, the American National Bank building and the Vertin block. Every window in the two blocks was broken in by the firemen to prepare for an emergency should the flames spread there. All money in the bank was moved from the tellers' cages to the vault to prevent loss by fire or theft. The beautiful interior of the bank was completely covered with water. There will be damage of several thousand dollars to the interior alone. The Clute barber shop also suffered heavily from smoke and

MURDER TRIAL OF MITCHELL MOVES TO CLOSE

CHARGED WITH SLAYING CORPORAL SAMUEL BOZIK, FORT SNELLING

11 SOLDIERS AND CIVILIANS DESCRIBE TRAGEDY IN FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT

Minneapolis, April 27.—(U.P.)—The first degree murder trial of Lee O. Mitchell, charged with having inflicted a fatal gun shot wound on Corporal Samuel Bozik, Fort Snelling, moved toward a close today following the testimony Friday of 11 soldiers and civilians who described the tragedy in federal district court.

Sergeant Fred Lillie, a "buddy" of Bozik enacted the shooting for the jury and declared he was positive it was Mitchell who fired the fatal shot.

Bozik was killed early Easter Sunday when he attempted to wrest a sawed-off shotgun from a bandit who attempted to hold-up a soldier card game.

Mitchell, a former Fort Snelling soldier, was captured before he could escape from the barracks in which the corporal was shot.

Under the federal law, first degree murder on a government reservation may be punishable by death, either by hanging or before a firing squad.

Washington, April 27.—(U.P.)—The war department has approved plans submitted by the state of Minnesota and counties of Sherburne and Wright for a bridge across the Mississippi river at Clearwater, Minn., it was learned today.

BOY DIES FROM INJURIES WHILE "BURNED AT STAKE"

Seattle, Wash., April 27.—(U.P.)—Phillip Epstein, 5, died today of burns inflicted when he was "burned at the stake," by other children "playing Indian."

He was tied to a fence post and sticks were piled at his feet. A flaming torch accidentally was dropped into the wood by one of the dancing, whooping "warriors," and Phillip's clothing was fired.

He broke his bonds and ran, a human torch. Mrs. E. F. Coughlin caught him and wrapped him in a sweater, extinguishing the fire, but he was too seriously burned to recover.

of the mass of wreckage as a spectre of the life of the business block.

Four years ago Little Falls had its last fire of account. It destroyed the block adjacent to the Realty Block. In its place now stands the Ryan block housing the Ryan Hardware Co. It came through the fire with blackened walls but otherwise little damaged because it was constructed on fireproof lines.

Seventy-five firemen fought the fire from 8 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. until they gained complete control of the situation.

Telephone service in the city was at a standstill and will be such until the temporary exchange which was started under construction while the fire was still raging, is completed.

Every man, woman and child in Little Falls this morning turned out to see the fire. Police lines were placed on the main street and additional policemen deputized to keep the crowds back of the ropes.

Brainerd first learned of the fire by telegraph and radio soon after 9 a. m. today. At that time telephone communication was out of order. Julius Viken, Brainerd wire chief, climbed a pole at Little Falls at 10:45 a. m. to make the first call through to Brainerd.

GERMANY SOLE CHAMPION TO REDUCE ARMIES

OTHER CONTINENTAL POWERS HAVE SHOWN NO DESIRE FOR REDUCTIONS

U. S. WILL NOT INSIST UPON THE LIMITATION OF TRAINED RESERVES

By HENRY WOOD
Geneva, April 27.—(U.P.)—Germany was seen today as the sole champion of reduction in Europe's standing armies.

The other continental powers have not shown any inclination toward reducing either their existing forces or their trained army reserves since the current preparatory disarmament commission gathered here two weeks ago.

The latest announcement by Hugh S. Gibson, chief American representative at the conference, that the United States would not insist upon limitation of trained reserves, coupled with Lord Chusendun's recent declaration that Great Britain would accept any agreement reached by the military powers, indicated more strongly than ever that Germany was practically alone among the important continental military nations in a demand for drastic land reductions.

Count Von Bernstorff, owing to the importance of Gibson's statement yesterday on the limitation of reserves, has communicated with the German government for further instructions on a method of procedure. He asked for permission to speak on the subject today.

It was understood that the action of United States and Great Britain in the question of land armaments indicated a realization on their part that military disagreement was purely a continental problem and was of no concern to naval powers.

Von Bernstorff said he needed 24 hours in which to consider the Gibson statement. He said it was of such tremendous importance that close scrutiny was necessary. Germany seemed willing to accept the role of lone champion of the cause of European military reduction.

America's practical assumption of a neutral position on the question of European land armaments was hailed by the French, who have been favoring unlimited trained reserves. Count Massigli, the French representative, and the Japanese delegation immediately announced their gratification at the attitude of the United States government.

Gibson said that the United States made the concession in order to facilitate an agreement between the nations. Heretofore the United States has insisted on trained reserves being included among the peace time effectives which were subject to limitation, in the belief that any country with trained reserves was in a superior military position.

"We still believe that," Gibson said, "but in a spirit of conciliation we shall no longer insist on it."

HOUSE WAYS, MEANS BODY IS BUSY WITH SAME

MEASURE TO BE PRESENTED TO HOUSE EARLY NEXT WEEK

BOTH HOUSES ARE NOW IN RECESS UNTIL MONDAY

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, April 27.—Muffled thunder emanated from the house ways and means committee room today where the tariff bill is being made ready for consideration in the house early next week.

Both houses were in recess until Monday. The senate is ready for another week of oratory over the debenture plan of farm relief but in the end probably will reject this and pass a bill much like the one the house adopted.

The house committee is finishing up six weeks of work in executive session, and while its members have denounced every "leak" of the proceedings, authentic information has been obtained indicating a strenuous contest is developing over such vital rates as sugar, wool and hides.

It was reported on good authority the sugar tariff which reaches every breakfast table may be boosted from $2.20 a hundred pounds to $3. The report has been sufficiently authenticated to cause the Cuban ambassador, Ferrer, to deliver a strong speech in Philadelphia today, denouncing the proposed increase.

Wool may be boosted from 31 cents; corn from 15 cents to 25 cents; cotton and wool textiles considerably above their present rates; hides, bricks, cements and manganese materially increased and lumber to remain unchanged on the free list.

These provisions can and may be altered before the bill is presented to the house probably next Tuesday.

All reports indicate clearly a heavy tariff battle is in prospect. Democrats are split over the issues and have announced their anger over not being admitted to secret republican meetings where some parts of the bill are being written. The unusual secrecy has resulted in charges that numerous deals are being made between sectional representatives, a practice known as "log rolling," whereby representatives of various sections form an alliance to put over mutually beneficial rates.

Senate republicans already have announced their hearings are to be secret although they do not expect to begin work on the bill for a month. They say they want to frame a bill which can be taken to the floor of both houses and put through virtually without amendment, in order there will be no log-rolling on the floor.

The only senate committee meeting today was the judiciary committee called by Chairman Norris to vote upon the property of Secretary of Treasury Mellon's stock holdings while he remains in office.

The senate will resume consideration of the farm bill Monday while the house is expected to adjourn on Monday until Tuesday in order to await the report on the tariff bill from the ways and means committee.

The flight was reported to have started after a battle in which 1,000 rebels were said to have been killed and hundreds wounded. General Plutarco Elias Calles, federal minister of war, was understood by Vasquez to have reached Navajon, Sonora, where the encounter took place.

GERMANY SOLE CHAMPION TO REDUCE ARMIES

OTHER CONTINENTAL POWERS HAVE SHOWN NO DESIRE FOR REDUCTIONS

U. S. WILL NOT INSIST UPON THE LIMITATION OF TRAINED RESERVES

By HENRY WOOD
Geneva, April 27.—(U.P.)—Germany was seen today as the sole champion of reduction in Europe's standing armies.

The other continental powers have not shown any inclination toward reducing either their existing forces or their trained army reserves since the current preparatory disarmament commission gathered here two weeks ago.

The latest announcement by Hugh S. Gibson, chief American representative at the conference, that the United States would not insist upon limitation of trained reserves, coupled with Lord Chusendun's recent declaration that Great Britain would accept any agreement reached by the military powers, indicated more strongly than ever that Germany was practically alone among the important continental military nations in a demand for drastic land reductions.

Count Von Bernstorff, owing to the importance of Gibson's statement yesterday on the limitation of reserves, has communicated with the German government for further instructions on a method of procedure. He asked for permission to speak on the subject today.

It was understood that the action of United States and Great Britain in the question of land armaments indicated a realization on their part that military disagreement was purely a continental problem and was of no concern to naval powers.

Von Bernstorff said he needed 24 hours in which to consider the Gibson statement. He said it was of such tremendous importance that close scrutiny was necessary. Germany seemed willing to accept the role of lone champion of the cause of European military reduction.

America's practical assumption of a neutral position on the question of European land armaments was hailed by the French, who have been favoring unlimited trained reserves. Count Massigli, the French representative, and the Japanese delegation immediately announced their gratification at the attitude of the United States government.

Gibson said that the United States made the concession in order to facilitate an agreement between the nations. Heretofore the United States has insisted on trained reserves being included among the peace time effective which were subject to limitation, in the belief that any country with trained reserves was in a superior military position.

"We still believe that," Gibson said, "but in a spirit of conciliation we shall no longer insist on it."

HOUSE WAYS, MEANS BODY IS BUSY WITH SAME

MEASURE TO BE PRESENTED TO HOUSE EARLY NEXT WEEK

BOTH HOUSES ARE NOW IN RECESS UNTIL MONDAY

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, April 27.—Muffled thunder emanated from the house ways and means committee room today where the tariff bill is being made ready for consideration in the house early next week.

Both houses were in recess until Monday. The senate is ready for another week of oratory over the debenture plan of farm relief but in the end probably will reject this and pass a bill much like the one the house adopted.

The house committee is finishing up six weeks of work in executive session, and while its members have denounced every "leak" of the proceedings, authentic information has been obtained indicating a strenuous contest is developing over such vital rates as sugar, wool and hides.

It was reported on good authority the sugar tariff which reaches every breakfast table may be boosted from $2.20 a hundred pounds to $3. The report has been sufficiently authenticated to cause the Cuban ambassador, Ferrer, to deliver a strong speech in Philadelphia today, denouncing the proposed increase.

Wool may be boosted from 31 cents; corn from 15 cents to 25 cents; cotton and wool textiles considerably above their present rates; hides, bricks, cements and manganese materially increased and lumber to remain unchanged on the free list.

These provisions can and may be altered before the bill is presented to the house probably next Tuesday.

All reports indicate clearly a heavy tariff battle is in prospect. Democrats are split over the issues and have announced their anger over not being admitted to secret republican meetings where some parts of the bill are being written. The unusual secrecy has resulted in charges that numerous deals are being made between sectional representatives, a practice known as "log rolling," whereby representatives of various sections form an alliance to put over mutually beneficial rates.

Senate republicans already have announced their hearings are to be secret although they do not expect to begin work on the bill for a month. They say they want to frame a bill which can be taken to the floor of both houses and put through virtually without amendment, in order there will be no log-rolling on the floor.

The only senate committee meeting today was the judiciary committee called by Chairman Norris to vote upon the property of Secretary of Treasury Mellon's stock holdings while he remains in office.

The senate will resume consideration of the farm bill Monday while the house is expected to adjourn on Monday until Tuesday in order to await the report on the tariff bill from the ways and means committee.

Mrs. A. L. Gage returned home Saturday from St. Paul where she left her son Lee for treatments at the Children's hospital. We are hoping he gets better soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Glanville are staying at the home of Floyd's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Glanville.

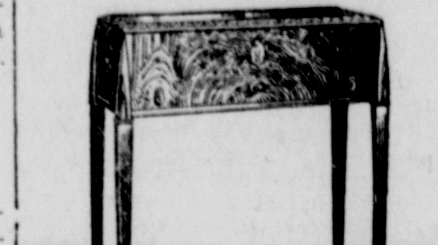

Brainerd callers Monday and Tuesday were Mr. and Mrs. Haire, F. J. Stropp, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Shipka, Ed. Shipka, Mrs. Jane Borden, Chas. Borden, R. C. Stropp and Mrs. F. E. Howe.

We understand there is a petition asking the commissioners to pave or tarvia state aid road No. 3 from Brainerd to Merrifield. It should be from Hunts Y to Brainerd as state aid road No. 3 and No. 6 meet at Hunt's Y. It sure needs a hard road to hold up the traffic this road carries the year around.

GRAPHIC OUTLINES OF HISTORY

By D. E. WHITNEY

Flaxwheel in Londonderry, New Hampshire

In 1719, several hundreds of emigrants from the north of Ireland settled at Londonderry, New Hampshire. They introduced the manufacture of linen into the country, and soon deft hands of the housewives in every log cabin could be seen working the little flaxwheel.

Character, good taste and consideration for those whom we are privileged to help mark the service this institution renders.

CONGRESSMAN KNUTSON TAKES STAND FOR SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS

CONGRESSMAN HAROLD KNUTSON of this district takes a vigorous stand for the veterans of the Spanish-American War, following a statement of Representative John P. Hompe of the Minnesota legislature, who is a veteran of the Civil War, that the Spanish-American war was a joke.

The Congressman, who knows what he is talking about, writes to the Minneapolis Journal as follows:

I am at a loss to understand the motives of Representative John P. Hompe in referring to the Spanish-American war as "a joke."

As chairman of the pension committee of the lower house of congress, I am fairly conversant with the history of that war and I am wondering if Mr. Hompe is aware of the fact that the average service per soldier in the Spanish war was 14 months, which is higher than that of any other war; that it was fought by 100 per cent volunteers and the treaty which brought the conflict to a close gave us dominions that have been estimated to be worth $8,000,000,000, although the actual prosecution of the war cost the American people $1,200,000,000.

Is Mr. Hompe aware of the fact that the Spanish-American war made us a world power?

It should be unnecessary to remind Mr. Hompe of the valor displayed by those who answered the call of President McKinley in 1898. Their blood was shed in the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico, and a large number of those who did not get out of the country were quartered in fever infested camps. Many came out of that war physical wrecks. Back in '98 there were no government hospitals where the sick and wounded could be rehabilitated, neither did any of them receive compensation that in many cases exceeded $100 per month. They were brought home, discharged, and told to shift for themselves. Unfortunately for those who took part in the Spanish-American war, there were not enough of them to command attention politically. Had they numbered 5,000,000 instead of 300,000, a grateful people would have deluged them with honors and favors. To say the least, it comes with a mighty poor grace for any American to disparage the great work they performed.—Harold Knutson, Congressman, Sixth District of Minnesota. Washington, D. C.

MOTHER'S DAY

MEMORIES of mother are enshrined in the hearts of all men. Successful men of the world give much of the credit for their success to their mothers. It was the tact, talent and heroism of a courageous mother that gave Abraham Lincoln the chance to succeed, that inculcated in him the attributes that brought success.

The inspiration and teaching of their mothers has brought success in life to other famous statesmen and to great bankers, industrial leaders, famed scholars. Biographies of great men carry praise of their mothers and what they did for them.

In these days of many activities, of many clubs and societies, it often happens that the child of poor parents has more real contact with his mother than the child of the very rich. There is apparently more home life in the very poor circles than among the great and rich.

Andrew Carnegie brings out this fact in his autobiography when he says that "this is where the children of honest poverty have the most precious of all advantages over those of wealth. The mother, nurse, cook, governess, teacher, saint, all in one . . . thus were my brother and I brought up. What has the child of millionaire or nobleman that counts compared to such a heritage?"

Sunday, May 12, is the day especially set aside for honoring mother. It is observed by some act of kindness to mother, by services in churches of all creeds and by wearing a white carnation, in some places and a red one in others, emblematical of the purity, beauty, fidelity and peace of mother love, as a badge of the day.

Last year about a half million telegrams and cablegrams conveyed greetings to mother. In fact, the number of these greetings became so large that special telegram blanks have been adopted.

Presents of flowers and candy are sent. Special greeting cards are conveyed by mail and in person. There are many other ways to remember mother, sending photographs and other treasures.

THE BLAME FOR COLLISIONS

HUMAN nature, at its most unreasonable point, is apt to be manifested after an automobile collision, says the Park Rapids Journal. If one happens to witness such a smash, and gathers in the bunch that collects around the two colliding cars, he will probably hear some loud and irrational arguing.

The two drivers, if the collision was serious, are suffering from nervous shock, and will say things they would not say under ordinary conditions. Some people have the manliness to admit they were wrong, but the ordinary thing is for each driver to maintain that he was wholly right and not to blame in any way.

The truth usually is that both parties were somewhat to blame, though one of them may have been principally at fault. These things happen so quickly that it is almost impossible to assess the responsibility with strict accuracy. But if either one of the two drivers had been following a policy of special caution, nothing would probably have happened.

And in that regard the Dispatch would say that the good driver has an eye on the approaching car as well as his own. You must watch the other fellow as well as yourself and make allowance for any false moves of the other fellow. Conforming to all the traffic rules will not save your car and yourself if the other fellow is wrong and you do not make allowance for it. A man may be right and still get his car dented.

It all depends on the locality and who is looking. The other day the news columns carried the story of a girl who was fined $100 for dancing in the nude on her lawn. Down at the Byrd expedition Antarctic headquarters a learned professor ran naked 100 yards in 20 below zero weather, to see how the human body would react to intense cold.

PEOPLE operating through committees often do things they would not do as individuals.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

AT seventeen Daphne Haines finds herself the victim of a hard, calculating stepmother who had married her father for money. Crystal, the second Mrs. Haines' beautiful daughter, becomes the darling of the household, usurping Daphne's place in her father's affections. The two women tolerate Daphne until Ralph McKevitt, a wealthy young man who had been calling upon Crystal, discovers Daphne in the garden one lovely Spring day, and admires her. Crystal indignantly resents this, resorts to tears and temperament, but is finally placated when her mother promises to "fix everything." Realizing that Daphne developing into beautiful womanhood may prove a thorn in the path of Crystal's conquest of McKevitt, Mrs. Haines determines to make the girl's life miserable. Cleverly she provokes a quarrel between Daphne and her father. Slightly, cunningly, Mrs. Haines gold-digs her aged husband to buy finery for Crystal, while Daphne is neglected. The pressure on family purse strings becomes so great that Mr. Haines calls a halt. Then his wife bitterly denounces him. Daphne feels that she can no longer tolerate this sordid, wild mystic power over her father, for no matter how the coarse woman insults him, he invariably comes crawling back to her seeking forgiveness. Daphne feels that she no longer has a place in her father's heart, so after a weary night she decides to leave home. Daphne is ridiculed by Crystal and her stepmother when she announces she is going to San Francisco, where she hopes to find employment. Crystal mocks her with: "Heaven will protect the innocent!" Mrs. Haines assumes an air of injury—she is a martyr for a good cause! Daphne's father longs to take her in his arms, but is afraid of his wife. As Daphne leaves, the old man tries to find solace in his pipe.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VI.

IT took a long time to pack, though all the things folded easily into the one suitcase. Daphne's possessions were few.

Nobody missed her when she went to town, nobody knew when she came back. But she did care. She looked around the old room for the last time. Straightened her hat again at the mirror. She had dressed so carefully. Her best dress, blue linen and a pleated skirt and a white collar, the black straw hat from last Summer, the little red leather purse with her best handkerchief poking out the corner.

All ready . . . nothing to wait for. But she lingered. Funny, "This was mother's room, too," she thought, "and she wasn't happy here either. . . she used to cry." That same wallpaper was there then, faded daisies on a background that was still blue in a neat square behind the closet door. Well that was over. Nothing to keep her now, own father. Once she thought he wanted her. Just once, in her whole life. It was the day they took her mother away and buried her on the hillside under the drying, wind-swept grass.

She had been so dazed, so lonely and afraid, so worn with weeping, and he had been so cold and far away in his black clothes, seeing not to care. And then, when they had come back to the empty house with the chairs in rows as the undertaker had left them, with the shades still drawn, shutting out the sun, shutting in the damp, funeral smell of florists' flowers, then she had come upon him, sitting all alone in the parlor, with his head in his hands.

And he had suddenly seemed old and lonely, and needing her. A pathetic old man in shirt sleeves, his best black coat over the back of the chair, his small hand curled inside his. She felt his big, rough fingers close over hers gratefully, a convulsive movement, a spasm of pain. His voice was softer, kinder than it had ever been when he said, "You and I, all alone now, girl." And something went down in his throat that sounded like "Sorry . . . didn't mean to be hard . . . just a way."

She had leaned toward him then, her thin little face twitching pitifully. "Oh, let's love each other now—let's begin—begin all over—"

But she couldn't go on, her voice broke, she was crying again. And then Mrs. Garroty, the dressmaker who had come to make the black dress for the funeral, was pulling her away from her father.

Puffing and blowing sweetly. "There, there, no tears, girl! We gotta be brave, and find the sunshine. Now now you mustn't be selfish and make your poor dear papa feel any worse than he does—take Auntie Adelina's hankie!"

Auntie Adelina's hankie! Black-bordered . . . as if Mrs. Garroty had anything to mourn about, as if she'd ever call her Auntie Adelina!

But Adelina Garroty's red face and brassy yellow hair had come between them just the same. She had lost her father, and never could find him again. And after awhile she had to call Mrs. Garroty "Mamma".

Nothing to keep her now . . . nothing. . . They were finishing lunch in the kitchen when she came down, carrying the suitcase, the purse and coat in her hand.

"I'm going to the city. I've decided to get a position. I know I can, because I can type fast, and my shorthand is good. I—I know you don't want me here—"

She said the first part very fast, because she had said it over so many times in her mind, but she stumbled on the last part. Hesitated, floundered.

"Well! If that's the way you feel about it!" her stepmother said crisply. "I'm sure I have nothing to say. I'm not one to hold anybody against their will—not I!"

Crystal snickered into her napkin. "Heaven will protect the working girl," she murmured. "Will you keep quiet?" Her mother turned on her angrily. And then back to Daphne. "Well—what is it now? Out with it—what are you waiting for if you're going—"

"So, if you go—go—only don't come back. You're making your own bed, you'll have to lay on it—"

He went back to his hash, breathing noisily.

Daphne picked up the suitcase. At the door she looked back. You ought to kiss your father when you're going away. . . . But he said to Adelina, still with his mouth full, "I see where Hoggins wants to sell his cow."

She gave up then, closed the door behind her, walked up the orchard road in the sun and the dust to the highway, to wait for the bus.

The driver jumped down from his high seat and took her shabby bag. "San Francisco? Right?" She climbed in beside two drummers in loud checked suits. They looked at her curiously. One nudged the other. "Some baby!"

But Daphne did not see them. Her eyes were blinded with tears.

In the old house beyond the orchards, getting further and further away every minute, Old Man Haines followed his wife from room to room, his short arms dangling restlessly.

"You don't think Daphne'll get into any trouble?" "Oh, she'll be back soon enough," Adelina returned briskly. "Well . . ." he murmured.

"Well . . ." He would have liked to go after her, or call her back, but he was more afraid of Adelina. So he lit his pipe instead.

CONGRESSMAN KNUTSON TAKES STAND FOR SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR VETERANS

CONGRESSMAN HAROLD KNUTSON of this district takes a vigorous stand for the veterans of the Spanish-American War, following a statement of Representative John P. Hompe of the Minnesota legislature, who is a veteran of the Civil War, that the Spanish-American war was a joke.

The Congressman, who knows what he is talking about, writes to the Minneapolis Journal as follows:
To the Editor of the Journal:

I am at a loss to understand the motives of Representative John P. Hompe in referring to the Spanish-American war as "a joke."

As chairman of the pension committee of the lower house of congress, I am fairly conversant with the history of that war and I am wondering if Mr. Hompe is aware of the fact that the average service per soldier in the Spanish war was 14 months, which is higher than that of any other war; that it was fought by 100 per cent volunteers and the treaty which brought the conflict to a close gave us dominions that have been estimated to be worth $8,000,000,000, although the actual prosecution of the war cost the American people $1,200,000,000.

Is Mr. Hompe aware of the fact that the Spanish-American war made us a world power?

It should be unnecessary to remind Mr. Hompe of the valor displayed by those who answered the call of President McKinley in 1898. Their blood was shed in the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico, and a large number of those who did not get out of the country were quartered in fever infested camps. Many came out of that war physical wrecks. Back in '98 there were no government hospitals where the sick and wounded could be rehabilitated, neither did any of them receive compensation that in many cases exceeded $100 per month. They were brought home, discharged, and told to shift for themselves. Unfortunately for those who took part in the Spanish-American war, there were not enough of them to command attention politically. Had they numbered 2,000,000 instead of 300,000, a grateful people would have deluged them with honors and favors. To say the least, it comes with mighty poor grace for any American to disparage the great work they performed.—Harold Knutson, Congressman, Sixth District of Minnesota. Washington, D. C.

MOTHER'S DAY

MEMORIES of mother are enshrined in the hearts of all men. Successful men of the world give much of the credit for their success to their mothers. It was the tact, talent and heroism of a courageous mother that gave Abraham Lincoln the chance to succeed, that inculcated in him the attributes that brought success.

The inspiration and teaching of their mothers has brought success in life to other famous statesmen and to great bankers, industrial leaders, famed scholars. Biographies of great men carry praise of their mothers and what they did for them.

In these days of many activities, of many clubs and societies, it often happens that the child of poor parents has more real contact with his mother than the child of the very rich. There is apparently more home life in the very poor circles than among the great and rich.

Andrew Carnegie brings out this fact in his autobiography when he says that "this is where the children of honest poverty have the most precious of all advantages over those of wealth. The mother, nurse, cook, governess, teacher, saint, all in one . . . thus were my brother and I brought up. What has the child of millionaire or nobleman that counts compared to such a heritage?"

Sunday, May 12, is the day especially set aside for honoring mother. It is observed by some act of kindness to mother, by services in churches of all creeds and by wearing a white carnation, in some places and a red one in others, emblematic of the purity, beauty, fidelity and peace of mother love, as a badge of the day.

Last year about a half million telegrams and cablegrams conveyed greetings to mother. In fact, the number of these greetings became so large that special telegram blanks have been adopted.

Presents of flowers and candy are sent. Special greeting cards are conveyed by mail and in person. There are many other ways to remember mother, sending photographs and other treasures.

THE BLAME FOR COLLISIONS

HUMAN nature, at its most unreasonable point, is apt to be manifested after an automobile collision, says the Park Rapids Journal. If one happens to witness such a smash, and gathers in the bunch that collects around the two colliding cars, he will probably hear some loud and irrational arguing.

The two drivers, if the collision was serious, are suffering from nervous shock, and will say things they would not say under ordinary conditions. Some people have the manliness to admit they were wrong, but the ordinary thing is for each driver to maintain that he was wholly right and not to blame in any way.

The truth usually is that both parties were somewhat to blame, though one of them may have been principally at fault. These things happen so quickly that it is almost impossible to assess the responsibility with strict accuracy. But if either one of the two drivers had been following a policy of special caution, nothing would probably have happened.

And in that regard the Dispatch would say that the good driver has an eye on the approaching car as well as his own. You must watch the other fellow as well as yourself and make allowance for any false moves of the other fellow. Conforming to all the traffic rules will not save your car and yourself if the other fellow is wrong and you do not make allowance for it. A man may be right and still get his car dented.

It all depends on the locality and who is looking. The other day the news columns carried the story of a girl who was fined $100 for dancing in the nude on her lawn. Down at the Byrd expedition Antarctic headquarters a learned professor ran naked 100 yards in 20 below zero weather, to see how the human body would react to intense cold.

PEOPLE operating through committees often do things they would not do as individuals.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

AT seventeen Daphne Haines finds herself the victim of a hard, calculating stepmother who had married her father for money. Crystal, the second Mrs. Haines' beautiful daughter, becomes the darling of the household, usurping Daphne's place in her father's affections. The two women tolerate Daphne until Ralph McKevitt, a wealthy young man who had been calling upon Crystal, discovers Daphne in the garden one lovely Spring day, and admires her. Crystal indignantly resents this, resorts to tears and temper, but is finally placated when her mother promises to "fix everything." Realizing that Daphne developing into beautiful womanhood may prove a thorn in the path of Crystal's conquest of McKevitt, Mrs. Haines determines to make the girl's life miserable. Cleverly she provokes a quarrel between Daphne and her father. Slightly, cunningly, Mrs. Haines gold-digs her aged husband to buy finery for Crystal, while Daphne is neglected. The pressure on family purse strings becomes so great that Mr. Haines calls a halt. Then his wife bitterly denounces him. Daphne feels that she can no longer tolerate this sordid, disordered household. Daphne learns that her stepmother must wield mystic power over her father, for no matter how the coarse woman insults him, he invariably comes crawling back to her seeking forgiveness. Daphne feels that she no longer has a place in her father's heart, so after a weary night she decides to leave home. Daphne is ridiculed by Crystal and her stepmother when she announces she is going to San Francisco, where she hopes to find employment. Crystal mocks her with: "Heaven will protect the girl who goes to San Francisco!" Daphne assumes an air of injury—she is a martyr for a cause. Mrs. Haines assumes an air of injury—she is a martyr for a cause. Daphne's father longs to take her in his arms, but is afraid of his wife. As Daphne leaves, the old man tries to find solace in his pipe.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VI.
It took a long time to pack, though all the things folded easily into the one suitcase. Daphne's possessions were few. Nobody missed her when she went to town, nobody knew when she came back.

But she did care. She looked around the old room for the last time. Straightened her hat again at the mirror. She had dressed so carefully. Her best dress, blue and a pleated skirt and a white collar, the black straw hat from last summer, the little red leather purse with her best handkerchief poking out the corner.

All ready . . . nothing to wait for . . . But she lingered. Funny to be leaving . . . leaving home. "This was mother's room, too," she thought, "and she wasn't happy here either . . . she used to nappy here either . . . That same wallpaper was there then, faded daisies on a background that was still blue in a neat square behind the closet door. Well that was over. Nothing to keep her now, nobody wanted her, not even her own father. Once she thought he wanted her. Just once, in her whole life. It was the day they took her mother away and buried her on the hillside under the drying, wind-swept grass.

She had been so dazed, so lonely and afraid, so worn with weeping, and he had been so cold and far away in his black clothes, seeming not to care. And then, when they had come back to the empty house with the chairs in rows as the undertaker had left them, with the shades still drawn, shutting out the sun, shutting in the damp, funeral smell of florists' flowers, then she had come upon him, sitting all alone in the parlor, with his head in his hands.

And he had suddenly seemed old and lonely, and needing her. A pathetic old man in shirt sleeves, his best black coat over the back of the chair. Her small hand curled inside his. She felt his big, rough fingers close over hers gratefully, a convulsive movement, a spasm of pain. His voice was softer, kinder than it had ever been when he said, "You and I, all alone now, girl." And something way down in his throat that sounded like "Sorry . . . didn't mean to be hard . . . just a way . . ."

She had leaned toward him then, her thin little face twitching pitifully. "Oh, let's love each other now—let's begin—begin all over—"

But she couldn't go on, her voice broke, she was crying again. And then Mrs. Garroty, the dressmaker who had come to make the black dress for the funeral, was pulling her away from her father.

Puffing and oozing sweetness. "There, there, no tears, girl! We gotta be brave, and find the sunshine. Now now you mustn't be selfish and make your poor dear papa feel any worse than he does—take Auntie Adeline's hankie!"

Auntie Adeline's hankie! Black-bordered . . . as if Mrs. Garroty had anything to mourn about, as if she'd ever call her Auntie Adeline!

But Adeline Garroty's red face and brassy yellow hair had come between them just the same. She had lost her father, and never could find him again. And after awhile she had to call Mrs. Garroty "Mamma" . . .

Nothing to keep her now . . . nothing . . . They were finishing lunch in the kitchen when she came down, carrying the suitcase, the purse and coat in her hand.

"I'm going to the city. I've decided to get a position. I know I can, because I can type fast, and my shorthand is good. I—I know you don't want me here—"

She said the first part very fast, because she had said it over so many times in her mind, but she stumbled on the last part. Hesitated, floundered.

"Well! If that's the way you feel about it, her stepmother said crisply. "I'm sure I have nothing to say. I'm not one to hold anybody against their will—not I!" Crystal snickered into her napkin. "Heaven will protect the working girl," she murmured.

"Will you keep quiet?" Her mother turned on her angrily. And then back to Daphne. "Well, what is it now? Out with it—what are you waiting for if you're going—"

"So, if you go—go—only don't come back. You're making your own bed, you'll have to lay on it—"

He went back to his hash, breathing noisily.

Daphne picked up the suitcase. At the door she looked back. You ought to kiss your father when you're going away. . . . But he said to Adeline, still with his mouth full, "I see where Hoggins wants to sell his cow."

She gave up then, closed the door behind her, walked up the orchard road in the sun and the dust to the highway, to wait for the bus.

The driver jumped down from his high seat and took her shabby bag. "San Francisco? Right?" She climbed in beside two drummers in loud checked suits. They looked at her curiously. One nudged the other. "Some baby!" But Daphne did not see them. Her eyes were blinded with tears.

In the old house beyond the orchards, getting further and further away every minute, Old Man Haines followed his wife from room to room, his short arms dangling restlessly.

"You don't think Daphne'll get into any trouble?" "Oh, she'll be back soon enough," Adeline returned briskly. "Well," he murmured.

"He was afraid. He would have liked to go after her, or call her back. But he was more afraid of Adeline. So he lit his pipe instead."

"Nothing I guess—nothing—"

"Because if it's money you gotta remember your father ain't rich, he's only a poor man, and times are hard—"

"No, no—I have money—plenty!" Daphne's dark head was tilted proudly, her soft red mouth was firm.

But her eyes were pleading—pleading for something . . . she didn't know what. They searched her father. Surely he would say something. Surely he would stop eating, tell her not to go like that

His thick hands lifted the coffee cup, he drank noisily, with a greedy, sucking sound. He patted the hash high on his fork in the neat, high pyramid, patted it down with his knife.

"Don't you care?" The words tumbled out in a little breathless rush. "Don't you care at all? Because if you do—I won't go if you don't want me to. I'd stay—I'd—"

"Don't let me stop you," he said. "You're so smart, go on! And the time will come, young lady, when you'll appreciate the good home you left, and wish you hadn't been smarter than your father!" He caught Adeline's eye . . . he wanted her approval so . . . His voice was harsher still when he went on, dramatically,

"Oh, Crystal, it was my mother's!"

SAND GREENS GET NEW SUR-

COMING ALONG NICELY

The sand greens will be ready for play at the Brainerd Country Club course on Sunday, W. H. Cleary, president of the club, announced today.

The greens have been given a new surface and are now in fine condition.

The fairways are equal to their mid-season shape and the roughs which have been levelled off are such that it is practically impossible to lose a ball.

On each of the new greens the grass is growing fast. Under present indications the greens will be ready for play the middle of the season.

The entire property of the Brainerd Country Club has been beautified this spring.

McGRAW MADE A MISTAKE WHEN HE TRADED GEO. HARPER

New York, April 27.—(UP)—One of the smartest men in baseball, John J. McGraw, has perhaps made more costly mistakes in trading ball players than any other successful manager.

One of his discards—George Harper—knocked the Giants out of first place in the National league yesterday by hitting a home run with two men on base and leading the Boston Braves to a 4 to 2 victory.

McGraw traded Harper to the Cardinals last May for Bob O'Farrell who has never been of much value to the Giants, but Harper has been poison to the Giants ever since.

B. C. C. COURSE IN GOOD CONDITION FOR SUNDAY GOLF

FAIRWAYS ARE IN MID-SEASON SHAPE; ROUGHS HAVEN'T HAD CHANCE TO GET ROUGH

SAND GREENS GET NEW SURFACE; NEW GRASS GREENS COMING ALONG NICELY

The sand greens will be ready for play at the Brainerd Country Club course on Sunday, W. H. Cleary, president of the club, announced today.

The greens have been given a new surface and are now in fine condition.

The fairways are equal to their mid-season shape and the roughs which have been levelled off are such that it is practically impossible to lose a ball.

On each of the new greens the grass is growing fast. Under present indications the greens will be ready for play the middle of the season.

The entire property of the Brainerd Country Club has been beautified this spring.

McGRAW MADE A MISTAKE WHEN HE TRADED GEO. HARPER

New York, April 27.—(UP)—One of the smartest men in baseball, John J. McGraw, has perhaps made more costly mistakes in trading ball players than any other successful manager.

One of his discards—George Harper—knocked the Giants out of first place in the National league yesterday by hitting a home run with two men on base and leading the Boston Braves to a 4 to 2 victory.

McGraw traded Harper to the Cardinals last May for Bob O'Farrell who has never been of much value to the Giants, but Harper has been poison to the Giants ever since.
